Colorado. - A survey of western Colorado, or rather of the unexplored portions of it, has been ordered by the national government, and will be made by an expedition under the auspices of Professor Hayden, to start this spring. This district lies west of the main range of the Rocky Mountains, and for lack of exploration no attempt has ever been made to plant settlements in it. The expedition will be divided into six sections so as to cover the whole territory, and is to be continued annually until completed. The region will most probably be found to contain both gold and silver and other mineral resources, in which event settlements will soon follow, and a railroad from Denver will penetrate the most practicable pass. At present all the settlements of Colorado lie east of the main range of the Rocky Mountains, and while their progress is gratifying, it would be much more so if the area of colonization were extended, as it will be by the results of this exploration. A great deal of attention to agriculture has been developed in Colorado of late years, and live stock has been sent east to Kansas city in considerable numbers. Wheat and other crops also flourish, and hence the effort to find new arable regions available for emigrants who have no taste for mining. Dr. Hayden's ex-plorations will furnish the first official and autheutic information respecting the geological character and resources of western Colorado, and therefore its results will be very impor-tant. The head waters of the great Colorado river of the west are there, and the valley of the Green and other streams may be found attractive to farming emigrants as well as to

--It would be idle to multiply instances of the thorough humanity and geniality of Agassiz. Everybody who knew him can tell hundreds of anecdotes illustrative of his sympathy with all forms of life, whether in the jelly-fish, the hu man child, the developing boy or girl, the mature man or woman. Still his conviction of the immateriality and personality of mind was something wonderful in so austere a naturalist. We happened once to please him by defining a jelly-fish as organized water. "Now look at it through the microscope," he said. "But, through the microscope,' Agassiz, the play of organization is so wonderful that it seems to me that nothing but mind can account for it." "You are right." was his answer; "in some incomprehensible way, God Almighty has created these beings, and I can not doubt of their immortality any more than I doubt of my own." His fealty to the rights of animals exceeded that of any great naturalist who ever preceded him. Incompetent as we are to give him his due rank among the great naturalists of the world, we think he excelled every naturalist who has gone before him in striking at the soul and individuality of all animals below man. It is impossible to convey in words the peculiar feeling which Agassiz had on this matter. Doubtless this large and genial genius is now satisfied. We can not penetrate beyond the vail .-- Boston what is now a flourishing city, lived a stalwart blacksmith, foud of his pipe and his joke. He was also tond of his blooming daughter, whose many graces had enspared the affectious of a young printer. The couple, after a season of billing and cooing "engaged themselves," and nothing but the consent of the young lady's parents prevented their union. To obtain this an interview was arranged, and the typo prepared a little speech to admonish and convicce the old man, who sat enjoying his pipe in perfect content.

friendship, their mutual attachments, their hopes for the future and like topics; and taking the daughter by the hand he sald: "I am now, sir, to ask your permission to transplant this lovely flower from its parent bed"-but his feelings overcame him and he forgot the rewainder of his oratorical flourish, blushed, stammered, and finally wound up with, "from its parental bed into my own. The father keenly relished this discomfiture of the suitor, and removing his pipe and blowing a cloud, replied :

"Well, young man, I don't know as I girl first.

AN EFFECTIVE SERMON .-- Wm. Brown was a local preacher and a tenant on the vast estate of Gen. Van Rensselaer. Once Brown received notice to pay his rent. He collected a load of wheat and went with it to Albany, and calling on the General, told him that was all he could raise. "What do you dor" said the General. "Work at tailoring and let out my "Don't you preach sometimes?" "Yes," Will you preach at my house to-night?" The General called in his friends to hear the poor mechanic. He was a small man and unpromising in his appearance, and the landlord undoubtedly thought to have a little fun with him. Brown was shrewd and fearless. He took for his text, "They that will be rich," &c. The next day the General gave him a free lease of his farm during his life and that of his wife, receipted

The symptons of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general costive, sometimes alternating with lax. The head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sen-sation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaing of weakness, debility, and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most in-

It seemed as though I had read, "Wanted, a boy to send down to perdition!" I tancied I saw a bright earnest boy koing to a bar room, to seek a living by that learful trade of selling wine and rum. I could imagine how, one by one, all the good impulses and desires he had in the beginning fell before the evil influences of the dram shop, how he learned to drink, to swear, and to steal; how bad companions came around and helped him to ruio. Ah, my lad, or whoever you are, who may be tempted by such a call, let me tell you that you had better work in the field, or at a forge, or at digging ditches, anything honest, than to degrade yourself by selling death to others.
